As you may know, there is a difference between tax AVOIDANCE, whereby people use artificial but legal methods to minimise the tax they pay, and tax EVASION, whereby people act illegally to pay less tax, or no tax at all.

In general, do you think it is acceptable or unacceptable to LEGALLY avoid paying tax?

It is acceptable to legally avoid tax
It is unacceptable to legally avoid tax

If you personally had an accountant who could show you how you reduce the tax you had to pay through artificial but legal means, would you do so?

Yes, I probably would
No, I probably wouldn't

Thinking about companies and people that use tax avoidance methods to reduce the amount of tax they have to pay, do you think the government is or is not doing enough to reduce their use of tax avoidance schemes?

The government is not doing enough to reduce the amount of tax avoidance
The government is already doing all it can reasonably be expected to do to reduce the amount of tax avoidance

A tribunal has found that Gary Barlow, the former member of Take That, took part in a tax avoidance scheme. He will now have to pay back the tax he avoided.

Gary Barlow previously received an OBE for his work for charity. Do you think he should or should not have to give back his OBE?

A European Court has ruled that Google should have to delete search results that contain "irrelevant" or "outdated" information about people, giving people a legal right to have "irrelevant" and "outdated" data held about them erased on request
Thinking about this, which of the following best reflects your view?

The power to remove outdated information risks being a bad thing - allowing prominent people and companies to censor embarrassing or awkward information from the past that the public should be able to find

The power to remove outdated information is probably a good thing - allowing people greater protection of their online privacy and making sure people's reputations aren't unfairly damaged by stories from long ago
