Part of the government's anti-terrorism programme, PREVENT, consists of seeking to identify people who are at risk of being radicalised, and includes schools and social projects having a duty to report people they think have extremist sympathies to the authorities. Do you think this approach is or is not appropriate?

Currently Britain shares our counter-terrorism information with the US, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Some details of the police investigation into the Manchester bombing have been leaked to and appeared in the American press, including the name of the bomber and photos of bomb components recovered from the scene.

The Manchester police have said they will temporarily stop sharing information with the US because of the leak.

Do you think the police are right to halt sharing information with the US on this case?

Theresa May declined to take part in a leaders debate at this election, and Jeremy Corbyn declined to take part unless Mrs May did. Do you think Theresa May and Jeremy Corbyn should have taken part in a head to head debate?

On the subject of social care for the elderly or disabled...

Currently, anyone in England with assets over £23,250 are required to pay for social care - for residential care, this includes the value of their home. It has been suggested that there should be a cap on the maximum amount that anyone can be required to contribute towards their total care. Which of the following do you think would be an appropriate cap?
