In 2002 Theresa May said that the Conservative party were seen as the "nasty party" and they needed to improve their image. Thinking about how the Conservative party have tried to improve their image since then, which of the following best reflects your view?

- David Cameron has managed to change the Conservative party's image and make it less of the "nasty party"
- David Cameron has failed to change the Conservative party's image, and it is still seen as the "nasty party"
- The Conservative party was never seen as the "nasty party" anyway
- None of these
- Don't know

Last weekend several newspapers reported that a senior figure in the Conservative party had described Conservative party members as "mad, swivel eyed loons". The Conservative party have denied this.

Whether or not you believe the story, do you think "mad, swivel eyed loons" is a fair or unfair description of Conservative party members?

Earlier this year the government dropped the Draft Communications Data Bill which would have required internet service providers and mobile phones companies to store details of everyone's calls, webmail and social media for twelve months in case it was needed to investigate crime. Supporters of the Bill had said the powers were necessary to fight serious crime, opponents that it would have been a "snoopers charter" that infringed human rights.

Which of the following best reflects your view?

The Communications Data Bill would give the government more powers to fight terrorism and the terror threat shows it should be continued with after all

The Communications Data Bill would not have done much to fight terrorism, but would have given the government unnecessary powers to snoop on emails and phone calls - it was right to drop it

As you may know, there is a difference between tax AVOIDANCE, whereby companies/people use artificial but legal methods to minimise the tax they pay, and tax EVASION, where companies/people act illegally to pay less tax, or no tax at all.

In general, do you think it is acceptable or unacceptable to LEGALLY avoid paying tax?

It is acceptable to legally avoid tax

In recent months several well known companies have been criticised for not paying enough tax in the UK. Do you currently boycott the products or services of any companies in response to them not paying their fair share of tax?

Yes, there are companies I actively boycott because of they don't pay enough tax
No, while I care whether companies pay tax I don't really know enough about the subject or which companies don't pay tax to boycott them
No, the price and quality and other considerations are more important to me than whether a company pays tax
Not sure
