Currently most people who live in social housing owned by their local council have a right to buy their council home at a discount of up to £77,000, or £102,700 in London, depending on how long they have lived in the property. This does not apply to most people living in social housing that is owned by housing associations. Some people have suggested a new policy where the right to buy is extended to people living in properties owned by housing associations. Do you think this is a good or bad idea?
