Thinking about how Theresa May has handled the issues of protecting against terrorism and protecting people's human rights, which of the following best reflects your view?

Theresa May has gone too far with anti-terrorism powers, infringing people's human rights and giving the police and the security services too many powers to snoop into ordinary people's lives	18	6	27	23	12	7	22	28	24	13	20	22	18	13	21	15	21	19	11	18	28	16	19

Below are some changes that people have suggested to help combat terrorism in Britain. In each case, can you say whether you think it would be a good idea, or would be an unnecessary overreaction?
Putting a duty on schools and colleges to look out for any signs of students being radicalised and take action against it?

Which of these statements comes closer to your view?
On balance, private schools benefit Britain: they provide many pupils with a good education, and are often beacons of excellence that help to raise standards in state schools	42	37	67	22	33	46	65	18	26	38	36	36	31	37	42	42	30	41	42	39	30	23	28	51

Parliament currently has two chambers, the House of Commons and the House of Lords.

Currently the House of Lords is mostly made up of people appointed by the political parties or by the House of Lords Appointments Commission, which nominates independent Lords. The House of Lords also has seats for senior Church of England bishops and 92 remaining hereditary peers.

Some people have suggested that the House of Lords should be replaced by a second chamber that is mostly or entirely elected by the public.

Which would you prefer?

From what you have seen or heard, do you think it is possible for people to "buy" places in the House of Lords by making donations to political parties?

Is possible - whatever they claim, in practice it is clear that parties do make people Lords in exchange for donations	69	66	74	71	81	70	72	73	76	62	55	62	71	78	72	65	71	70	65	67	74	71	73

Currently British citizens have the right to live and work in other EU countries and EU citizens have the right to come and live and work in Britain.

Under European Union law citizens from other European Union countries are allowed to claim benefits if they live in Britain and British citizens are allowed to claim benefits if they go to live in another European Union country. It is illegal to discriminate against other EU citizens based on nationality, but countries can have benefit rules based on residence or past contributions.

Since leaving the job of Prime Minister Tony Blair has done a lot of paid and unpaid work advising governments, some, such as the Kazakh regime which have been controversial. He has also earned significant sums personally from speeches and advisory jobs with organisations such as JP Morgan and most recently a Saudi oil firm linked to the royal family. What is you feeling about this?

Good for him – he worked very hard as PM for ten years and has every right to make money now
He has the right to earn some money, but the amount of money he has earned is too much
It is totally wrong that he is using his past position to earn large amounts of money

Tony Blair also works as a Special envoy for the United Nations, United States, European Union and Russia, promoting the peace process in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

Do you think Tony Blair's role as a peace envoy in the Middle East is or is not compatible with his business interests?

Is compatible - it is possible for him to work as a peace envoy AND have extensive private business interests

Is not compatible - it's not possible for him to work both as a peace envoy AND have extensive private business interest
