Thinking about the funds the Labour party receives from the trade unions, which of the following best reflects your view?

There is nothing wrong with Labour receiving a large amount of funds from the Trade Unions - they are part of the Labour party
 Labour should try and reduce the amount of money they receive from the Trade Unions - the present reliance on Union money risks giving them too much influence over the party's policies and candidate selection

Many Labour MPs are sponsored by Trade Unions, receiving donations to help their election campaigns or run their offices. Like all donations, these have to be publically declared.

Do you think it is or is not acceptable for MPs to be sponsored by Trade Unions in this way?
