Currently, the police national crime database records crimes that are serious enough to punish with a jail sentence and some other crimes set out in law.

For example, failing to provide a breath test or stealing a bicycle are recordable offences but careless driving and driving without insurance are not.

Currently, not all wildlife crimes are considered recordable offences.

Before taking this survey, did you know that all police forces in the UK are encouraged to have an officer specifically responsible for dealing with wildlife crime (called Wildlife Crime Officers), that the UK has its own National Wildlife Crime Unit (NWCU) and that there are other specialist units, for instance Border Force at UK airports which deal with the import and export of animals amongst other things?
