There is currently a debt crisis in the Eurozone (that is, countries that use the Euro, the European single currency), with some countries in the Eurozone unable to pay their debts without help. Unless they are given money by other European countries it is likely they would have to default on their debt payments, which would risk bringing down European banks and causing another economic crisis. Countries in Europe have agreed a plan for bailing out countries in difficulties and protecting European banks. The costs of trying to save the Eurozone may come to hundreds of billions of pounds.

Do you think countries in Europe are right or wrong to spend money to try and save the Eurozone?

The government have recently been piloting a new scheme to relax border controls for EU citizens at busy times to prioritise controls on people entering Britain from outside the EU. However, it has been revealed that border controls were also relaxed for people entering Britain from outside the EU at busy times. The government have said that this was done by the border agency without the permission of the Home Secretary, Theresa May.

Do you think Theresa May should resign over the relaxation of border controls?

Thinking about the balance between maintaining control of the borders and avoiding delays at airports and ports, which of the following best reflects your view?

It is important that there are strict border controls, even if this means there are sometimes long delays and queues at airports and ports

We should try to prevent long queues and delays at airports and ports, even if this means there are less strict border controls for some groups
