Currently EU rules protect the status of such products as Arbroath smokies, Scotch whisky, Scottish salmon, Orkney beef and Shetland wool, so that only products actually made in these places can describe themselves this way.

Which of these statements comes closer to your view?

In practice, if Brexit goes ahead, the UK would still be able to insist that companies in the rest of the EU are not allowed to give these labels to their products	10	6	35	10	9	6	11	9	10
