Imagine that, instead of the proposed two-option referendum on independence there was a three-option referendum, offering people the choice of full Scottish independence, increased devolution to the Scottish Parliament or maintaining the Scottish Parliament's existing powers. How would you then vote?

If Scotland votes to become an independent country in September this year there would be a period of negotiation to allow issues like Scotland's currency and EU membership to be decided before Scotland became fully independent in March 2016.

The Scottish government have said that they would like an independent Scotland to continue using the pound as part of a currency union with the remainder of the United Kingdom. The Chancellor, George Osborne, and the Labour and Liberal Democrat parties have said that they would not agree to this.

Do you think...

They are bluffing in order to increase the chances of a NO vote - if Scotland does vote YES things will be different, and the remainder of the UK would probably agree to a currency union

They are not bluffing and mean what they say - if Scotland does vote YES the remainder of the UK would probably not agree to a currency union

Another issue that would need to be agreed if Scotland voted YES is what an independent Scotland's future relationship with the European Union would be

In practice, what do you think would happen to Scotland's membership of the European Union if Scotland became independent?

Scotland would negotiate with the European Union so that it remained a member of the EU from its first day of independence

Scotland would have to leave the European Union and renegotiate a new membership deal after it became independent

Scotland would have to leave the European Union and would probably not be able to renegotiate a new deal, remaining outside the EU

Don't know

If Scotland votes YES, do you think they should keep the Queen as head of state, or should they have an elected head of state instead?

Should keep the Queen as head of state

Should have an elected head of state instead

If Scotland vote YES in September there would be a year of negotiating the details of independence before Scotland formally becomes an independent country in March 2016

Do you think Scottish members of the Westminster Parliament should or should not continue to attend and vote in the House of Commons during that time?

Scottish MPs should continue to attend and vote in the House of Commons in the period between Scotland voting yes and formally becoming independent

Scottish MPs should no longer attend or vote in the House of Commons in the period between Scotland voting yes and formally becoming independent

During the period between the referendum and Scottish independence there would be a general election in the United Kingdom. If Scotland does vote yes, do you think...

Scotland should elect MPs to Westminster in the 2015 election to serve for the final year before independence

Scotland should not elect MPs to Westminster in the 2015 election if there is only a year before independence
